

Meagan Renee Pitts Ellis

January 25, 1970 - September 27, 2018

Meagan Renee Pitts Ellis was born January 25, 1970 to Frankie Mae Jackson and Johnny Pitts, Sr. in Orlando, Florida.

Meagan attended Evans High School in Orlando, Florida, but ended her academic career early and becoming a mother to a beautiful baby boy. After giving birth, she quickly returned to her academics. Meagan completed her education by graduating with a high school diploma from Orlando Technical School. She later furthered her education by becoming a Certified Nurses Aid (CNA).

After becoming a CNA, Meagan began working for various nursing homes and home healthcare facilities both local, as well as abroad. Meagan made a very unique impact with her patients, a lasting impression on coworkers and an everlasting mark in this world that no other can match.

Although Meagan was born with Sickle Cell Anemia, she never allowed it to ruin her life. Meagan not only lived life, she became life. Even as a member of the United States Navy, Sickle Cell did not stop her from accomplishing her goals in life. Meagan was one that loved her son, she loved her family and she loved God!

Meagan is preceded in death by her parents: Frankie Mae Battle and Johnny

Pitts, Sr., her baby sister Delphi Nicole Jackson.

Meagan Renee Pitts Ellis is survived by her loving son: Pastor Jeremy Pitts, Orlando, Florida; sisters: April Ramsey and Catherine Simmons, both of Orlando, FL; brothers: Johnny Pitts, Jr., and Sammy Simmons, both of Orlando, Florida; nephews: Cornelius Ramsey and Wayne Ramsey, both of Orlando, Florida; a host of other relatives and sorrowing friends.
